Lorna A. Squire's 2005 installation, Frozen, is an exploration of an ice cream bar, a summer sensation, and the visual experience of an object, on a warm day, that is typically cold. Frozen's dynamism comes from the way the installation breaks the experience down into its component parts, suggesting a more detailed view. The artwork is a site-specific piece, adapted to the space at the Regina Gouger Miller Gallery. The installation includes an ice cream bar, a refrigerator, and a freezer. The ice cream bar is made of wood and has a glass top. The refrigerator and freezer are both white and feature the same design. The installation also includes a video of the artist, Lorna A. Squire, discussing her work. The video is available for viewing in the gallery during the exhibition.
